Asian Anti-Cellulite Tea

The green tea ritual to stay hydrated, swap out sugary drinks and team up with Pilates against cellulite.

WALL PILATES · 21-DAY CHALLENGE

The little dark green herb

The "Asian tea" is green tea, made from the leaves of Camellia sinensis — the same plant enjoyed for centuries in China and Japan. You can find it at any grocery store: loose-leaf, in tea bags or as a powder (matcha).

What the tea does — and what it doesn't

Cellulite depends on genetics, hormones, fat and the firmness of your skin and muscles. No tea on its own makes cellulite disappear. The tea is an ally to your plan:

- Hydration: it helps you drink more fluids throughout the day, which makes your skin look better.
- A smart swap: unsweetened, it has practically zero calories and replaces soda and bottled juices.
- Ritual: a cup at the same time every day reminds you to take care of your body — and to do your workout.

> The duo that works
> While the tea takes care of hydration, Wall Pilates firms your glutes and legs. Firmer muscle under the skin is what improves the look of cellulite the most.

How to make it the right way

1. Heat the water until the first little bubbles appear (160 to 175 °F). Don't use boiling water: it makes the tea bitter.
2. Use 1 teaspoon of leaves or 1 tea bag per cup (7 oz).
3. Steep for 2 to 3 minutes and strain. Any longer also makes it bitter.
4. Drink it unsweetened. If you need to, add a little cinnamon, lemon or mint for flavor.

5 recipes so you never get bored

1. Classic warm

1 green tea bag + 7 oz of hot water. Steep 3 minutes. Ideal in the morning.

2. Green tea with ginger and lemon

1 tea bag + 2 thin slices of ginger + 7 oz of hot water. Steep 3 minutes and finish with a squeeze of lemon.

3. Iced with mint

Brew 2 cups of tea, let it cool and refrigerate with mint leaves and lemon slices. Replaces your lunchtime soda.

4. Matcha latte

1 teaspoon of matcha + 2 oz of hot water (whisk until dissolved) + 5 oz of hot milk or plant milk. Dust with cinnamon.

5. Green tea with cinnamon and apple

1 tea bag + 1 cinnamon stick + a few apple slices + 8 oz of hot water. Steep 5 minutes with the apple and remove the tea bag at 3.

Your daily ritual

When	What to do
Morning	1 cup of the classic or the ginger version, with breakfast.
Lunch	Swap your soda for iced tea with mint.
Afternoon	Matcha latte or cinnamon tea with your snack — nothing after 5 pm.
Evening	Water only. Green tea has caffeine and can disrupt your sleep.

Precautions: no more than 3 cups a day. Green tea has caffeine — avoid it at night and if you have anxiety, insomnia, high blood pressure or arrhythmia. Pregnant or breastfeeding women and anyone taking blood thinners or other daily medications should talk to their doctor first. Stick to tea in a cup: don't use concentrated extract capsules, which have been linked to liver problems.
